InfoTrac is a collection of 14 databases which can be searched together or separately. The collection includes databases that have both scholarly and general periodicals on science, humanities, law, psychology and sociology for college-level research; encyclopedias and specialized reference sources for multidisciplinary research, biographical information on over 900,000 individuals, and an extensive collection of critical essays on contemporary writers. More specialized resources include a database of full-text education journal articles geared to teachers and school administrators, a health database that covers topics ranging from fitness to prescription drugs, and two business databases that index general and scholarly sources that cover all a variety of management topics and include company profiles.

Ebsco Databases are a collection of eight databases that include MasterFile Premier, Newspaper Source, Ebsco Animals, Health source – Consumer Edition, ERIC, Topic Watch and Science Reference Center. These databases contain information that is geared toward students of many levels, from high school through college. There is also access to Funk & Wagnall's New World Encyclopedia which can be very helpful in getting background information.

Lexis Nexis covers over 5,900 full-text publications including newspapers (New York Times), business, legal and news journals.

Massachusetts Newsstand provides full-text of the Boston Globe, Boston Herald, Worcester Telegram & Gazette and other regional newspapers.

Oxford Reference Collection Online contains over 130 subject dictionaries and the Oxford Encyclopedia to answer quick reference questions and to verify facts and dates.
